Press Release – For Immediate Release

Dr. Clive Bridgham, member of the CSRI, is One of 33 Doctors of Chiropractic From Around the World Who are on Hand at the World Games

Kaohsiung, Taiwan July 22, 2009: Dr. Clive Bridgham, a chiropractic physician from Barrington, RI was recently invited by the Federation Internationale De Chiropratique Du Sport to work with a team of his peers, to be available to treat more than 5000 athletes from 105 countries who competed for medals in the 8th World Games.

The World Games, which were first held in 1981 in California, are part of the International Olympic movement and are able to use the five Olympic rings. Competitions include familiar sports such as archery, billiards, gymnastics, karate, sumo and rugby. Other sports include korfbal, wushu, fin swimming and dragon boat racing. In all, there are 35 categories of sports that are in the 2009 World Games which were held for two weeks in mid July.

According to Dr. Bridgham, “Many of the injuries we were seeing are comparable to injuries many athletes suffer from, such as back injuries, neck injuries, knee injuries and shoulder injuries. These types of musculoskeletal injuries can be
